COMMENCEMENT NEXT WEEK

EIGHT GIRLS AND TWO BOYS TO RECEIVE DIPLOMAS.

The Class of 1922 Invites Public to Graduation Exercises.

The Senior class of 1922 will finish their courses of study in the Grayling schools next week, and will observe class day Wednesday, June 14, and commencement Thursday, June 15. Many invitations have been sent out but there are still many others that the young people wish to attend, and at their request we repeat their formal invitation, which is desired to be directed to the general public.

Commencement Invitation.

THE SENIOR CLASS OF THE
GRAYLING HIGH SCHOOL REQUEST THE HONOR OF YOUR PRESENCE
COMMENCEMENT AND CLASS
DAY EXERCISES
HIGH SCHOOL AUDITORIUM
GRAYLING, MICHIGAN.

The first event will be the baccalaureate sermon that is to be preached at the Michelson Memorial church by the pastor, Rev. C. E. Doty, Sunday evening, June 11. Everybody cordially invited to attend.

At the commencement Wednesday night, the following program will be presented:

Processional.....Orchestra
Invocation.....Rev. Fr. Bosler
Salutatory.....Beatrice Austin
President's Address.....Earl Nelson
Class History.....Hester Hanson
Class Poem.....Ida Walden
Class Prophecy.....Vella Hermann
Giftatory.....Oscar Taylor
Class Grumbler.....Anna Ruresky
Class Will.....Ruth Taylor
Valedictory.....Ruth McCullough
Class Song.....Class of 1922
Benediction.....Rev. Fr. Bosler
Class Motto—En Avant.
Class Colors—Blue and Gold.
Class Flower—Lily.

Commencement will be held Thursday night. The commencement address will be delivered by Professor Woody of Ann Arbor.

At the close of the address graduation diplomas, that these young people have so justly earned by their efforts, will be presented. This will close their studies in Grayling. With a good education, such as they have received in the Grayling schools, they should be eminently fitted for higher studies or for entering into useful occupations that should gain for them a good competence and fit them for useful and honored citizens.

Before closing we wish to emphasize that there is a further duty that the public owes these young graduates, and that is that everyone should make every effort to be present at these closing exercises of the school. This is our institution, built and operated at the expense of our people and the event of graduation should be as much a part of our lives as it is a part of the lives of the graduates. We should with pleasure set aside three dates—Sunday night baccalaureate, Wednesday night class day and Thursday night commencement, and when the times come be at the respective places, in honor to our class of 1922, to our school faculty, and to our schools generally.

AN EXPLOSION OF PEDIGREE TRUTH.

(Notes of the Grayling Schools)

We tried to think of something to say something that would strike your fancy. But somehow words falter and fail us. So we'll try and say "goodbye" without any fuss.

GRADE NOTES.

The third, fourth and fifth grades are planning on having a picnic very soon at Leece's Grove.

Amelia Bonday and Netra McDougall have left school.

Paul Osterander has returned to school after a long period of absence.

The sixth grade had a play for Decoration Day. It was Lincoln, Deputy Surveyor. There were four boys who acted out the play.

Mr. Parr, father of Kathleen Parr, former principal of the High School, was a visitor at school last week.

The members of the Algebra class will have a picnic Wednesday afternoon.

If the Junior boys do not pay their class dues, there will be no Junior-Senior party this year.

The Junior High school had their program last Friday, that being the last program for this year. It was a very good one.

Rev. Doty spoke to the school Friday on the subject "Vibrations." It was a speech of inspiration, especially so to the Seniors. It was certainly enjoyed by all who heard it.

Clarence Ingalls, Clarence Sherman and Tracy Heath have left school. Why quit now boys?

The Commencement exercises will be held in the School Auditorium Wednesday night.

nesday and Thursday, June 14 and 15. Professor Woody of Ann Arbor will give the lecture. The Baccalaureate will be held Sunday June 11 by Rev. Doty at the Methodist Episcopal Church. Everyone is asked to attend.

Examinations begin next Monday and continue through Tuesday and Wednesday a. m. For those who don't have to take them there is little worry, but for some—Oh!!

The pupils of the Eighth grade who are to receive diplomas will receive them this week Friday. There were fifty out of seventy-five who will receive diplomas.

The person who removed the flowers from the school lawn, has very little respect for the labor of the people trying to make the school grounds one of the beauty spots of the town.

Tit-Bits.

Miss Fuller in Gen. Science class: "What relation is there between Cuba and the United States?"

Bright pupil: "Second cousin."

Miss Hertzler after explaining that the comma was used between words closely related: "James, give an illustration for the use of a comma."

James Miller: "Well how would it be between a cow and a horse. I guess they're closely related, they both are about the same size and each have hoofs." Well said James.

The average girl is a queer creature. She'll make fun of a young man one day and marry him the next.

Some men are like elevators—they come down in the world every time they go up.

Dentist (prodding Don's gum in search of fragment of tooth): "That's funny, I don't seem to feel it."

Don Reynolds (ironically): "You are lucky."

DeVere Cripps had been waiting about five minutes in a restaurant, and finally became impatient. Seeing one of the waiters he hollered: "Hey there!"

The waiter looked at DeVere a minute and then said: "Sorry kid, but we don't serve it here."

Too bad DeVere, too bad.

Almost any pretty girl can bring out the silliness in a man's nature.

It may be cowardly to kick a man when he is down, but it is sometimes necessary in order to get him up.

The End Forever and Ever.

P. S. We want to thank the teachers for the school notes that they contributed, and we want to especially thank Miss Bellows for the help that she gave us in this past year of T. N. T. (Cross out one T and you have last initial of the editors.)

CAR OWNERS MUST GET REGISTRATION CARDS.

It is estimated that more than 175,000 Michigan automobile owners have so far failed to secure their certificates of registration which are demanded by law.

The law is very stringent with regard to these certificates, and Charles J. Deland, the secretary of state, declares that prosecutions will begin under this act immediately after July 1. In case of arrest, the presiding judge has no alternative but to impose a fine of not less than $25. The fine may be as high as $1,000 under the law.

In the event of the sale of a motor vehicle, unaccompanied by a certificate of title, the penalty under the law may include imprisonment up to 10 years in addition to the fine.

Application blanks for certificates of registration may be obtained at the office of the county clerk.

GRAYLING TAKES TWO MORE

SATURDAY GAME ALMOST WENT TO VISITORS.

Grayling base ball team made it two straight Saturday and Sunday defeating the Saginaw Rainbows in two exciting games. Saturday's game looked like a count for the visitors up until the eighth inning, when the score stood 9 and 7 favor the Rainbows. Salisbury who was not in as good form as in the previous game he had pitched went out in the 8th inning in favor of Laurant, who with his team mates held the visitors so that they made no more runs. The final inning was our big inning. Babe Laurant came up and went out on a pop fly. W. Laurant came next and pounded out a three bagger, to the center lot and was followed by E. Johnson, who singled getting to first base. Next Salisbury took hold of the old hickory and hit one for three stations scoring Laurant and Johnson. Morrow featured in knocking a single back of short stop scoring Salisbury.

Following is the line-up for Saturday's game.

Sunday Game.

The game on Sunday was a much closer game than the day before in the part of scores. The visiting team made one score in the initial frame and one in the final. Laurant on the mound for the home team fooled the visitors allowing them but eight hits while the locals registered 17 hits off Cole, throwing for the visitors.

Both were good games and each one sees Grayling going a little faster.

Next Saturday and Sunday they will play the Koscusko Base Ball club of Saginaw, and snappy games are looked for, as the team comes here with the reputation of being the strongest team in the Saginaw Valley.

ROBERTS-TRUDEAU.

The marriage of Miss Clara Ann Trudeau, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Trudeau, Sr., to Mr. Lawrence Roberts Tuesday morning at St. Mary's church, was one of simplicity. The hour was seven o'clock and the ceremony was performed by Rev. A. O. Bosler. The bride chose her sister, Miss Gertrude Trudeau for her bridesmaid, and the groom was assisted by Mr. Henry Trudeau, cousin of the bride. The children's choir rendered several pretty hymns during the nuptial mass. Both the bride and her bridesmaid wore becoming suits of blue tricotine, with hats to match, the bride's of orchid color and the bridesmaid's of peach color. Their corsages were white and pink roses.

After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served to the immediate members of the families of the young couple at the home of the bride's parents.

Mrs. Roberts who has been more familiarly known to her friends as "Billy" has assisted her father in their grocery store for the past four years and her pleasing personality has won for her many friends. Mr. Roberts came to Grayling a couple of years ago from Cheboygan, shortly after returning from service overseas. He is a young man of fine principles and is popular with his friends as also is Mrs. Roberts.

The young couple are enjoying a honeymoon trip in Detroit and other places and on their return will make

COUNTY NURSE DEPARTMENT.

As has been seen, by reports handed in from time to time, that a large percentage of the children in the schools of Crawford County, have defects. The parents do not seem to realize what neglect of these may mean to the children.

Eyes—Eyestrain is a cause of headaches and backwardness in school and should be relieved to save the health and sight. Most cases should be fitted with glasses.

Tonsils and adenoids—One of the causes of earache. Also cause mouth breathing, frequent colds, sore throat and backwardness in school. Are your child's second teeth coming in evenly? If not, then look for adenoids. Adenoids and diseased tonsils can be removed at any time of the year. Don't wait. Permanent defects like deafness and bad jaw formation result.

Teeth—Small cavities filled now may save the teeth for years. Roots and abscessed teeth should be removed. They give out poison, which weakens the vitality of the child. Special attention should be paid to sixth year molar—that is the first molar after baby teeth. It is liable to decay early. It is the key tooth to proper jaw formation.

10% Underweight.

The undernourished child is a ready victim for colds, diseases of childhood and especially tuberculosis. Teach the child when young to eat plain wholesome food. Cereals, vegetables and milk are the three essential articles in a child's diet. Whole wheat bread and oatmeal are best for growing children. Milk, carrots, string beans, and other vegetables contain the all important vitamins.

Program of the Underweight Child.

1. A complete physical examination by a competent physician.
2. The remedy of defects found, i. e., diseased tonsils or adenoids removed; teeth treated; eye strain relieved, etc.
3. The usual three meals a day eaten very slowly, consisting of milk, butter, bread, cereals, vegetables, fruits, some sweets and little meat.
4. Two extra lunches at 10:30 and 3:30 of milk and crackers or bread and butter. Never give sweets between meals, as they impair the appetite.
5. A rest period of one hour in the afternoon and another half an hour in the afternoon and ten hours sleep at night, all with window wide open.

6. School hours shortened or given up entirely if need be until health is gained; outside classes and clubs omitted.

7. No vigorous exercise until the weight is normal, but plenty of play time out of doors.

8. No nervous excitement, few parties or movies until weight gaining habit is established.

This program is simple, possible, and cheap. There is no magic about it, but as a wise old physician once said of the cure for tuberculosis, "It is just living as everybody should live all of the time."

Causes of undernourishment.

1. Physical defects.
2. Lack of home control.
3. Over-fatigue.
4. Insufficient food and improper food habits.
5. Faulty health habits.

HENRY AND CONSTANCE

SYNOPSIS.—Wealthy and highly placed in the Chicago business world, Benjamin Corvet is something of a recluse and a mystery to his associates. After a stormy interview with his partner, Henry Spearman, Corvet seeks Constance Sherrill, daughter of his other business partner, Lawrence Sherrill, and secures from her a promise not to marry Spearman. He then disappears. Sherrill learns Corvet has written to a certain Alan Conrad, in Blue Rapids, Kansas, and exhibited strange agitation over the matter. Corvet's letter summons Conrad, a youth of unknown parentage, to Chicago. Alan arrives in Chicago. From a statement of Sherrill it seems probable Corvet is Corvet's illegitimate son. Corvet has deeded his house and its contents to Alan, who takes possession. That night Alan discovers a man ransacking the desks and bureau drawers in Corvet's apartments. The appearance of Alan tremendously agitates the intruder, who appears to think him a ghost and flees to the Miwaka. After a struggle the man escapes. Next day Alan learns from Sherrill that Corvet has deeded his entire property to him, introduced to Spearman, Alan is astounded at the discovery that he is the man whom he had fought in his house the night before.

"I'm afraid you've taken rather a bad time, Lawrence. Can't we get together later—this afternoon? You'll be about here this afternoon?"

"I think I can be here this afternoon," Alan said.

"Let's say two-thirty, then," Spearman turned and noted the hour almost automatically among the scribbled appointments on his desk pad; straightening after this act of dismissal, he walked with them to the door, his hand on Sherrill's shoulder.

"Circumstances have put us—Mr. Sherrill and myself—in a very difficult position, Conrad," he remarked. "We want much to be fair to all concerned."

He did not finish the sentence, but halted at the door. Sherrill went out, and Alan followed him; exasperation—half outrage yet half admiration—at Spearman's bearing, held Alan speechless. If every movement of Spearman's great, handsome body had not recalled to him their struggle of the night before—if, as Spearman's hand rested cordially on Sherrill's shoulder, Alan had not seemed to feel again that big hand at his throat—he would almost have been ready to believe that this was not the man whom he had fought. But he could not doubt that he had recognized Spearman beyond question. And Spearman had recognized him—he was sure of that; he could not for an instant doubt it; Spearman had known it was Alan whom he had fought in Corvet's house even before Sherrill had brought them together. Was there not further proof of that in Spearman's subsequent manner toward him? For what was all this cordiality except defiance?

Power and possession—both far exceeding Alan's most extravagant dream—were promised him by those papers which Sherrill had shown him. When he had read down the list of those properties, he had had no more feeling than such things could be to him; he had at first that Corvet's house could be his—until he had heard the intruder moving in that house. And now it was the sense that another was going to make him fight for those properties that was bringing to him the realization of his new power. He "had" something on that man—on Spearman. He did not know what that thing was; no stretch of his thought, nothing that he knew about himself or others, could tell him; but, at sight of him, in the dark of Corvet's house, Spearman had cried out in horror, he had screamed at him the name of a sunken ship, and in terror had hurled his electric torch. It was true, Spearman's terror had not been at Alan Conrad; it had been because Spearman had mistaken him for some one else—for a ghost. But, after learning that Alan was not a ghost, Spearman's attitude had not very greatly changed; he had fought, he had been willing to kill rather than to be caught there.

Alan thought an instant; he would make sure he still "had" that something on Spearman and would learn how far it went. He took up the receiver and asked for Spearman.

A voice answered—"Yes."

Alan said, evenly: "I think you and I had better have a talk before we meet with Mr. Sherrill this afternoon. I am here in Mr. Corvet's office now and will be here for half an hour, then I'm going out."

Spearman made no reply, but hung up the receiver. Alan sat waiting, his watch upon the desk before him—tense, expectant, with flushes of hot and cold passing over him. Ten minutes passed; then twenty. The telephone under Corvet's desk buzzed.

"Mr. Spearman says he will give you five minutes now," the switchboard girl said.

Alan breathed deep with relief; Spearman had wanted to refuse to see him—but he had not refused; he had sent for him within the time Alan had appointed and after waiting until just before it expired.

Alan put his watch back into his pocket and, crossing to the other office, found Spearman alone. There was no pretense of courtesy now in Spearman's manner; he sat motionless at his desk, his bold eyes fixed on Alan intently. Alan closed the door behind him and advanced toward the desk.

"I thought we'd better have some explanation," he said, "about our meeting last night."

"Our meeting?" Spearman repeated; his eyes had narrowed watchfully.

"You told Mr. Sherrill that you were in Duluth and that you arrived home in Chicago only this morning. Of course you don't mean to stick to that story with me?"

"What are you talking about?" Spearman demanded.

"Of course, I know exactly where you were a part of last evening; and you know that I know. I only want to know what explanation you have to offer."

Spearman leaned forward. "Talk sense and talk it quick, if you have anything to say to me."

"I haven't told Mr. Sherrill that I found you at Corvet's house last night; but I don't want you to doubt for a minute that I know you—and about your d—g of Benjamin Corvet and your cry about saving the Miwaka!"

A flush of blood came to Spearman's face; Alan, in his excitement, was sure of it; but there was just that flash, no more. He turned, while Spearman sat chewing his cigar and staring at him, and went out and partly closed the door. Then, suddenly, he reopened it, looked in, relocked it sharply, and went on his way, shaking a little. For, as he looked back this second time at the dominant, determined, able man seated at his desk, what he had seen in Spearman's face was fear; fear of himself, of Alan Conrad of Blue Rapids—yet it was not fear of that sort which weakens or dismays; it was of that sort which, merely warning of danger close at hand, determines one to use every means within his power to save himself.

Alan, still trembling excitedly, crossed to Corvet's office to await Sherrill. It was not, he felt sure now, Alan Conrad that Spearman was opposing; it was not even the apparent successor to the controlling stock of Corvet, Sherrill and Spearman. That Alan resembled some one—some one whose ghost had seemed to come to Spearman and might, perhaps, have come to Corvet—was only incidental to what was going on now; for in Alan's presence Spearman found a threat—an active, present threat against himself. Alan could not imagine what the nature of that threat could be. Was it because there was something still concealed in Corvet's house which Spearman feared Alan would find? Or was it connected only with that some one whom Alan resembled?

Constance Sherrill's most active thought that day was about Henry Spearman, for she had a luncheon engagement with him at one o'clock.

The tea room of a department store offers to young people opportunities for dining together without furnishing reason for even innocently connecting their names too intimately; if a girl is not seen there with the same man too often, there is something essentially casual and unpremeditated about it—as though the man and the girl, both shopping and both hungry, had just happened to meet and go to lunch together. As Constance recently had drawn closer to Henry Spearman in her thought, and particularly since she had been seriously considering marrying him, she had clung deliberately to this unplanned appearance about their meetings.

She glanced across at him, when she had settled herself, and the first little trivialities of their being together were over.

"I took a visitor down to your office this morning," she said.

"Yes," he answered.

Constance was aware that it was only formally that she had taken Alan Conrad down to confer with her father; since Henry was there, she knew her father would not act without his agreement, and that whatever disposition had been made regarding Alan had been made by him.

"Did you like him, Henry? I hoped you would."

He did not answer at once. The waitress brought their order, and he served her; then, as the waitress moved away, he looked across at Constance with a long scrutiny.

"You've seen a good deal of him, yesterday and today, your father tells me," he observed.

"Yes."

"It's plain enough you like him," he remarked.

She reflected seriously. "Yes, I do; though I hadn't thought of it just that way, because I was thinking most about the position he was in and about—Mr. Corvet. But I do like him."

"So do I," Spearman said with a seeming heartiness that pleased her. "At least I should like him, Connie. If I had the sort of privilege you have to think whether I liked or disliked him, I've had to consider him from another point of view—whether I could trust him or must distrust him."

"Distrust?" Constance bent toward him impulsively in her surprise. "Distrust him? In relation to what? Why?"

"In relation to Corvet, Sherrill and Spearman, Connie—the company that involves your interests and your father's and mine and the interests of many other people—small stockholders who have no influence in its management, and whose interests I have to look after for them."

"I don't understand, Henry."

"I've had to think of Conrad this morning in the same way as I've had to think of Ben Corvet of recent years—as a threat against the interests of those people."

Her color rose, and her pulse quickened. Henry never had talked to her, except in the merest commonplace, about his relations with Uncle Benny; it was a matter in which, she had recognized, they had been opposed; and since the quarrels between the old friend whom she had loved from childhood and he, who wished to become now more than a mere friend to her, had grown more violent, she had purposely avoided mentioning Uncle Benny to Henry, and he, quite as consciously, had avoided mentioning Mr. Corvet to her.

"I've known for a good many years," Spearman went on, reluctantly, "that Ben Corvet's brain was seriously affected. He recognized that himself even earlier, and admitted it to himself when he took me off my ship to take charge of the company. I might have gone with other people then, or it wouldn't have been very long before I could have started in as a ship owner myself; but, in view of his condition, Ben made me promises that offered me most. Afterward his malady progressed so that he couldn't know himself to be untrustworthy; his judgment was impaired, and he planned and would have tried to carry out many things that would have been disastrous for the company. I had to fight him—for the company's sake and for my own sake and that of the others, whose interests were at stake. Your father came to see that what I was doing was for the company's good and has learned to trust me. But you—you couldn't see that quite so directly, of course, and you thought I didn't like Ben, and there was some lack in me which made me fail to appreciate him."

"No; not that," Constance denied quickly. "Not that, Henry."

"What was it then, Connie? You thought me ungrateful to him? I realize that I owed a great debt to him; but the only way I could pay that debt was to do exactly what I did—oppose him and seem to push him in his place and be an ingrate; for, because I did that, Ben's been a respected and honored man in this town all these years, which he couldn't have remained if I'd let him have his way, or if I told others why I had to do what I did. I didn't care what others thought about me; but I did care what you thought; yet if you couldn't see what I was up against because of your affection for him, why—that was all right too."

"No, it wasn't all right," she denied almost fiercely, the flush flooding her cheeks; a throbbing was in her throat.

At half-past three, Alan left the office. Sherrill had told him an hour earlier that Spearman had telephoned he would not be able to get back for a conference that afternoon; and Alan was certain now that in Spearman's absence Sherrill would do nothing further with respect to his affairs.

Was there no one whom Alan could tell of his encounter with Spearman in Corvet's house, with probability of receiving belief? Alan had not been thinking directly of Constance Sherrill, as he walked swiftly north to the Drive; but she was, in a way, present in all his thoughts. As he approached the Sherrill house, he saw standing at the curb an open roadster with a liveried chauffeur; he had seen that roadster, in front of the office building that morning when Constance had taken him downtown. He turned into the walk and rang the bell.

The servant who opened the door knew him and seemed to accept his right of entry to the house, for he drew back for Alan to enter. Alan went into the hall and waited for the servant to follow. "Is Miss Sherrill in?" he asked.

"I'll see, sir." The man disappeared. Alan, waiting, did not hear Constance's voice in reply to the announcement of the servant, but Spearman's vigorous tones. The servant returned. "Miss Sherrill will see you in a minute, sir."

Through the wide doorway to the drawing room, Alan could see the smaller, portier entrance to the room beyond—Sherrill's study. The curtains parted, and Constance and Spearman came into this inner doorway; they stood an instant there in talk. As Constance started away, Spearman suddenly drew her back to him and kissed her. Alan's shoulders spontaneously jerked back and his hands clenched; he did not look away, as she approached, she became aware that he had seen.

She came to him, very quiet and very flushed; then she was quite pale as she asked him, "You wanted me?"

He was white as she, and could not speak at once. "You told me last night, Miss Sherrill," he said, "that the last thing that Mr. Corvet did—the last thing that you know of—was to warn you against one of your friends. Who was that?"

She flushed uneasily. "You mustn't attach any importance to that; I didn't mean you to. There was no reason for what Mr. Corvet said, except in Mr. Corvet's own mind. He had a quite unreasonable animosity."

"Against Mr. Spearman, you mean," she said.

"His animosity was against Mr. Spearman, Miss Sherrill, wasn't it? That is the only animosity of Mr. Corvet's that anyone has told me about."

"Yes."

"It was against Mr. Spearman that he warned you, then?"

"Yes."

"Thank you," he turned and, not waiting for the man, let himself out. He should have known it when he had seen that Spearman, after announcing himself as unable to get back to the office, was with Constance.

He went swiftly around the block to his own house and let himself in at the front door with his key. The house was warm; a shaded lamp on the table in the larger library was lighted, a fire was burning in the open grate, and the rooms had been swept and dusted. The Indian came into the hall to take his coat and hat.

"Dinner is at seven," Wassaquam announced. "You want some change about that?"

"No, seven is all right."

Alan went upstairs to the room next to Corvet's which he had appropriated for his own use the night before, and found it now prepared for his occupancy. When he came down again to the first floor, Wassaquam was nowhere about, but he heard sounds in the service rooms on the basement floor. He went part way down the service stairs and saw the Indian in the kitchen, preparing dinner. Wassaquam had not heard his approach, and Alan stood an instant watching the Indian's tall, thin figure and the quick movements of his disproportionately small, well-shaped hands, almost like a woman's; then he scuffed his foot upon the stair, and Wassaquam turned swiftly about.

"Anybody been here today, Judah?" Alan asked.

"No, Alan. I called tradesmen; they came. There were young men from the newspapers."

"What did you tell them?"

"Nothing."

"Henry telephoned I was to tell them nothing."

"You mean Henry Spearman?"

"Yes."

"Do you take orders from him, Judah?"

"I took that order, Alan."

Alan hesitated. "You've been here in the house all day?"

"Yes, Alan."

Alan went back to the first floor and into the smaller library. The room was dark with the early winter dusk, and he switched on the light; then he knelt and pulled out one of the drawers he had seen Spearman searching through the night before, and carefully examined the papers in it one by one, but found them only ordinary papers. He pulled the drawer completely out and searched the wall behind it and the partitions on both sides but they appeared solid. He put the drawer back in and went on to examine the next one, and, after that, the others. The clocks in the house had been wound, for presently the clock in the library struck six, and another in the hall chimed slowly. An hour later, when the clocks chimed again, Alan looked up and saw Wassaquam's small black eyes, deep set in their large eye sockets, fixed on him intently through the door. How long the Indian had been there, Alan could not guess; he had not heard his step.

"What are you looking for, Alan?" the Indian asked.

Alan reflected a moment. "Mr. Sherrill thought that Mr. Corvet might have left a record of some sort here for me, Judah. Do you know of anything like that?"

"No. That is what you are looking for?"

"Yes. Do you know of any place where Mr. Corvet would have been likely to put away anything like that?"

"Ben put papers in all these drawers; he put them upstairs, too—where you have seen."

"Nowhere else, Judah?"

"If he put things anywhere else, Alan, I have not seen. Dinner is served, Alan."

Alan went to the lavatory on the first floor and washed the dust from his hands and face; then he went into the dining room. Wassaquam, having served the dinner, took his place behind Alan's chair, ready to pass him what he needed; but the Indian's silent, watchful presence there behind him where he could not see his face, disturbed Alan, and he twisted himself about to look at him.

"Would you mind, Judah," he inquired, "if I asked you to stand over there instead of where you are?"

The Indian, without answering, moved around to the other side of the table, where he stood facing Alan.

which, for an instant, stopped her. "You should have told me, Henry; or—I should have been able to see."

"I couldn't tell you—dear," he said the last word very distinctly, but so low that she could scarcely hear. "I couldn't tell you now—if Ben hadn't gone away as he has and this other fellow come. I couldn't tell you when you wanted to keep caring so much for your Uncle Benny, and he was trying to hurt me with you."

She bent toward him, her lips parted; but now she did not speak. She never had really known Henry until this moment, she felt; she had thought of him always as strong, almost brutal, fighting down fiercely, mercilessly, his opponents and welcoming contest for the joy of overwhelming others by his own decisive strength and power. And she had been almost ready to marry that man for his strength and dominance from those qualities; and now she knew that he was merciful too—indeed, more than merciful. In the very contest where she had thought of him as most selfish and regardless of another, she had most completely misapprehended.

"I ought to have seen," she rebuked herself to him. "Surely, I should have seen that was it."

"How could you see?" he defended her. "He never showed to you the side he showed to me and—in these last years, anyway—never to me the side he showed to you. But after what has happened this week, can you understand now, and you can see why I have to distrust the young fellow who's come to claim Ben Corvet's place."

"Claim?" Constance repeated. "Why, Henry, I did not know he claimed anything; he didn't even know when he came here—"

"He seems, like Ben Corvet," Henry said slowly, "to have the characteristic of showing one side to you, another to me, Connie. With you, of course, he claimed nothing; but at the office—Your father showed him this morning the instruments of transfer that Alan Ben had—his other properties and his interest in Corvet, Sherrill and Spearman. I very naturally objected to the execution of those transfers, without considerable examination, in view of the fact that they put the controlling stock of Corvet, Sherrill and Spearman in the hands of a youth no one ever had heard of—and one who, by his own story, never had seen a ship until yesterday. And when I didn't dismiss my business with a dozen men this morning to take him to see me alone to threaten me."

"Threaten you, Henry? How? With what?"

"I couldn't quite make out myself, but that was his tone; he demanded an 'explanation,' of exactly what, he didn't make clear. He has been given by Ben, apparently, the technical control of Corvet, Sherrill and Spearman. His idea, if I oppose him, evidently is to turn me out and take the management himself."

Constance leaned back, confused. "He—Alan Conrad?" she questioned. "He can't have done that, Henry! Oh, he can't have meant that!"

"Maybe he didn't; I said I couldn't make out what he did mean," Spearman said. "Things have come upon him with rather a rush, of course; and you couldn't expect a country boy to get so many things straight. He's acting, I suppose, only in the way one might expect a boy to act who had been brought up in poverty on a Kansas prairie and was suddenly handed the possible possession of a good many millions of dollars. It's better to believe that he's only lost his head. I haven't had opportunity to tell you father these things yet; but I wanted you to understand why Conrad will hardly consider me a friend."

"I'll understand you now, Henry," she promised.

Had Your Iron Today?

Let's Have Raisin Bread Tonight

HOW long since you've had delicious raisin bread—since you've tasted that incomparable flavor?

Serve a loaf tonight. No need to bake it.

Just telephone your grocer or a bakery. Say you want "full-fruited bread—generously filled with luscious, seeded, Sun-Maid Raisins."

The flavor of these raisins permeates the loaf. A cake-like daintiness makes every slice a treat.

Serve it plain at dinner or as a tasty, fruited breakfast toast.

Make delicious bread pudding with leftover slices.

Use it all. You need not waste a crumb. Raisin bread is luscious, energizing, iron-food. So it's both good and good for you.

Serve it at least twice a week. Start this good habit in your home today.

But don't take any but a real, full-fruited genuine raisin bread.

Your dealer will supply it if you insist.

NATURALLY OBJECT OF ENVY

After All, What Is Power and Wealth Compared With Quality That Vincent Possessed?

Vincent wanted fame more than anything else when he was a young man, and he bent all his energies to attaining it; but though it came to many of his friends it passed him by.

Later, he thought that, after all, he would rather have money, for money could buy almost anything, but every venture that promised success turned out to be a failure. He became somewhat bitter, for money seemed to come of itself to others.

He had many friends who held corporations, titles, and in some cases almost the country. In their power he looked on it in envy, for though he tried with every power within him, he could not make others follow, and his friends seemed to do it easily and naturally.

He hated women. But they followed him around. Everywhere he went some woman was sure to

RADIO

INSTRUCTIONS FOR TROUBLE SHOOTING

How to Detect and Remedy the Open Circuit, Short Circuit and Leakage.

Radio circuits are subject to the same ills that the ordinary power circuits are subject to. However, to cure them is not such a difficult task as might be supposed, especially if some logical procedure is used.

If a receiver is well put together in the first place and all contacts and other parts gone over once in a while, there is no reason why there should be any trouble. But the human being is prone to err, so that for the "once in a while" that is liable to happen, this article will be devoted to the explanation of what might happen to a simple receiver and the best way to fix it.

The usual troubles of the receiver fall under one of the following three headings:

- 1—An open circuit.
- 2—A short circuit.
- 3—Leakage.

An open circuit can most easily be detected by means of a series lamp. Nearly every one has available the ordinary 110 volt lighting circuit. Take an ordinary extension cord and cut one wire at any convenient place and use those two ends as test clips or tips. The extension cord is plugged into the house lighting circuit at any convenient outlet and when the two test clips are held together the lamp will light as the circuit is closed. When the tips are held open the circuit is "open" and the light will go out.

Suppose it is desired to test for an open circuit in a tuning coil. Connect one tip to one end of the winding and the other test clip to the slider. As the slide is moved back and forth the light should remain lighted. If the light goes out at times there is an open circuit in the coil. If the light goes out when the coil is jarred the slider does not make good contact with the winding.

If a buzzer and battery are available they can be used in testing for an open circuit in the same way that the lamp can be used. Connect the battery and buzzer in series with the test clips or tips and any low resistance circuit can be tested.

The ground connections can be tested with a buzzer and battery, but do not use the house-lighting circuit to test for grounds because one side of the lighting circuit is already grounded and if the other side were connected to the ground a short circuit would exist and an excessive current flow.

If the ground wire is connected to the water pipe, connect one test tip to the ground and the other to the gas pipe, which is also grounded. The buzzer should buzz if one has a good low resistance ground.

Leakage usually exists between the antenna and the ground. An antenna should be well insulated from its support. The lead-in should be brought down to the point where it enters the wall of the station in such a manner that when the wind causes it to swing, it cannot touch any grounded material, and that rain and snow can't cause a path along which the current can ground. In bringing the lead-

To Test Telephone Cords.

In through the wall, insulate it well and inside the station use as short a piece of well-insulated wire as is possible to make good connection with the set.

To test the continuity of the circuit of a pair of telephone receivers, touch the tips of the cord phone to the tongue. If the receivers are in reasonably good condition a slight click will be heard. If the response in one receiver seems to be weaker than that in the other, examine the diaphragm of the receiver giving the weaker re-

NEW MATERIALS NOW IN USE

Bakelite and Formica Taking the Place of Wood for Insulating Purposes.

Bakelite and formica are coming into common usage on radio sets, taking the place of wood for insulating purposes. These substances may be sawed, filed, drilled and milled, but some care must be exercised in handling the substances or spitting will result.

When using either bakelite or formica for panel boards, mark on a piece of Bristol board or good cardboard dots for every hole to be drilled. The dots should then be labeled as to the size of the drill. "Layout" having been made, it is placed over the panel. Punch through the dots with a sharply pointed nail.

Do the drilling slowly from the front, so that if there are any surface chips they will be on the rear of the panel. When drills over an eighth of an inch in diameter are used it is advisable to start with small hole first.

TIPS TO THE RADIOIST

The higher the aerial the stronger the signals. An increase of five to ten feet in the height of the flat top aerial will increase signals.

Addition of a variable condenser to the secondary or to the primary of a loose coupler often helps to tune out the undesired signals.

The sliders on tuning coils often make poor contacts with the slide rod. Thus much of the signal strength is lost. You can overcome this by soldering a flexible wire to the slider.

Increase length of spreaders of two, three or four-wire aerials from six to ten feet for best results. Each wire should be from four to six feet from its neighbor. Two wires one or two feet apart are no better than one wire. Likewise four wires on short spreaders are no better than one wire.

Spouse and see if it is bent toward the pole place. Try tuning the diaphragm over if such is the case. Be careful when the diaphragm of a receiver is removed that the leads of fine wire from the magnet spools to the connection blocks do not become broken in handling.

If the continuity of the circuit of a pair of telephone receivers is checked and no response is heard when the cord tips are touched to the tongue, try checking each receiver of a double head set separately.

The two receivers are connected in series and to check either one separately, short circuit the tips of the cord leading to the other receiver first, outside of the case. Should it appear that there is an open circuit in the cord, short circuit both receivers where the cord enters the case and with a buzzer or lamp connected to the tips on the end of the cord test for an open circuit.

Care should be exercised by the operator when adjusting a crystal detector to see that his fingers do not touch the surface of the crystal or the contact point of the little spring. The oil secretion that exists in the skin together with the dust that it collects will render a crystal detector inoperative by the insulating film that it will cause to form on the portion of the crystal surface that is touched. Should the surface of the crystal get dirty as evidenced by the received signals becoming weaker and weaker, try cleaning the crystal with alcohol and a little brush. Or if this does not seem to remedy the trouble, chip off old surface so that an entirely new surface is presented to the spring.

AMATEURS SHOULD PLAY FAIR

Radio Inspector Schmidt Urges That They Learn the Laws and Regulations.

Nine out of every ten radio fans are good sports, but the tenth is either a fan with poor judgment or a "rotter." It is up to the amateurs to see that restrictions are not imposed upon them, by playing fair, says Radio Inspector L. R. Schmidt of the Ninth district.

This can be done by observing certain cautions and by becoming posted on the radio laws and regulations. A copy of these regulations may be obtained from the superintendent of documents, government printing office, Washington, D. C., for 15 cents. It is worth while to spend 15 cents in order to be a "square shooter" in the radio game.

The great trouble with amateurs is that when they want to send a message around a corner they put on all the power they have with the hope that some one in Texas might pick up their message. The object should be to use the minimum amount of power to get the message to its destination.

"In all circumstances, except in case of signals or radiograms relating to vessels in distress, all stations shall use the minimum amount of energy necessary to carry out any communication desired."

Amateurs should keep their wave length to 200 meters.

"They should use a 'pure wave' or, as the regulations state, 'if the sending apparatus is of such a character that the energy is radiated in two or more wave lengths, more or less sharply defined, as indicated by a sensitive wave meter, the energy in no one of the lesser waves shall exceed 10 per centum of that in the greater.'"

"The wave must be 'sharp.' As to this the regulations state: 'At all stations the logarithmic decrement per complete oscillation in the wave train emitted by the transmitter shall not exceed two-tenths when sending distress signals or signals and messages relating thereto.'"

Amateurs frequently are at fault in calling stations too often. The law states that they can call three times, send "Q" once and sign their station call three times; but often the amateurs will send the calls a dozen or more times.

POCKET RADIO RECEIVER.

The pocket radio receiver is a success. Many types have been built that have operated successfully and that may be carried in the vest pocket. The aerial may be a wire fence, a strand of wire dropped from a high window, and the ground a water pipe or fire hydrant. The success of broadcasting is obvious. Now is the time for some progressive city or town to establish community aerials, say, in the lamp posts, equip them with plugs for connections so that the fellow with a pocket set can plug in when he wants a little music, a speech, lecture, the latest news, etc. The cost of the aerial and plugs would be less than $10 a station.

DAIRY

WEIGHING MILK FOR MARKET

Less Trouble Between Producers and Dealers if Records Are Kept at Both Ends of Line.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Producers who ship milk to city distributors have voiced frequent complaints because of the disparity between their figures on the quantity of milk shipped and those of the dealers on the quantity received. In order to locate the cause of complaint by studying the actual loss between the country shipping point and the city plant the United States Department of Agriculture made an investigation on the Baltimore market. Records kept on more than 1,100 cans showed that the loss between the country station and the city plant was less than 1 per cent. The loss on trains, probably due to spilling, was only 0.12 per cent; and from the city railroad platform to the plant it was 0.55 per cent.

However, it was found that when the milk was weighed in the city plant there was a shortage of 2.56 per cent on the amount shipped according to can measure in the country. Of this shortage, 0.74 per cent was due to actual losses, while 1.82 per cent was the difference between can measure and weight. This is easily accounted for by the fact that cans become dented and battered, which decreases their holding capacity.

In a former investigation by the department, an even greater difference any was found between can measure and weight, the difference being over 3 per cent. It would seem that there would be less trouble between producers and dealers if the milk were weighed at both ends of the line.

PROVIDE PLENTY OF WATER

Cows Must Have Abundant Supply in Summer and Winter for Profitable Milk Production.

Successful dairy farmers find that it pays to provide plenty of good, clean, cool water for milk cows. Eighty-seven per cent of milk is water, as is nearly three-fourths of a cow's body. Experimental data show that the amount of water required by cows is in direct proportion to the amount of milk produced. In the summer, the average cow will require nearly three pounds of water for every pound of milk she produces. In one experiment a cow giving 27 pounds of milk drank 77 pounds of water daily. The same cow drank less than half as much when giving no milk.

In all cases, it is decidedly good practice to provide an abundance of clean, fresh water, cool in the summer and warm in the winter.

KEEP MILK AND CREAM COOL

Product Will Soon Sour on Warm Spring Days Unless Promptly Placed in Tank.

As warm weather approaches, better care must be taken of the milk and cream. The can of cream must be put into a cooling tank into as cold water as possible to keep the cream cool. Unless milk and cream is cooled promptly and well it will sour during the warm spring days.

PLANT CROPS FOR COW FEED

Animals Will Not Prove Profitable Unless Properly Fed—Ensilage and Alfalfa Urged.

Dairy cows are not profitable unless fed properly. Ensilage and alfalfa hay are the best cow feeds. The canes, kaffers, dars, feterita and corn are good cow crops for the silo. If alfalfa cannot be grown, cow peas, soy beans or peanuts are leguminous crops to plant for dairy cow feeds.

Dirty Milk Dangerous.

Dirty milk is much more dangerous than dirty water, because disease germs that would starve in water multiply rapidly in milk.

Quality Counts Most.

It is not half as important how many cows you keep as what kind and how.

Feeding for Milk.

Good feeding is necessary for milk production. The Scotch say "It is by the head that the cow gives milk."

Water Supply for Cow.

In the summer a cow will require an amount of water equal to about three times the amount of milk produced.

Effective Fly Spray.

A part each of pine tar and nicotine, four parts of coal oil, and 24 parts of water make an effective fly spray for cows.

Greatest Dairy Strangers.

THE AMERICAN LEGION

HOPE WARS ARE AT AN END

Statuette of Archangel Michael, Presented by General Diaz to the Legion Commander.

Wars are at an end when the Archangel Michael sheathes his sword. This is the hope expressed in the silver statuette presented by Gen. Armando Diaz, the hero of Italy, to Commander Hanford MacNider of the American Legion, and now preserved in the national trophy room of the Legion.

Replica of Famous Bronze Statue.

The statue is a replica in miniature of the great bronze statue of St. Michael that crowns the fortress of San Angelo in Rome. San Angelo is also known as Hadrian's Tomb, having been built in the second century A. D. by the Emperor Hadrian for his mausoleum and later converted into a fortress. Twelve hundred years ago Pope Gregory dreamed he saw the Archangel about to sheath his sword, and soon afterward a great pestilence disappeared. The statue was cast to commemorate the event.

PLANS RELIEF OF AFFLICTED

President Illinois Federation of Labor Proposes Arrangement in Cooperation With Legion.

John H. Walker, president for the last eight years of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, has proposed an official arrangement between organized labor and the American Legion for the relief of the sick and wounded of the World war and their dependents.

ed to this heartily and the matter is under consideration. Walker started work in the Illinois mills before he was ten years old and at eleven was a member of the Knights of Labor. At some time or other he has served in practically every subordinate office in the miners' organizations of Illinois.

Steel Helmet Inventor Dead.

The man who saved numbers lives through his introduction of the steel helmet in the World war died recently in Paris. He was Doctor Monprofit, a member of the chamber of deputies of France and a veteran of the French ambulance corps. Had the war continued it is very possible that the struggling armies would have gone out in steel body armor as well as helmets, for the plan of Doctor Monprofit for the use of breastplates of steel had been practically perfected at the time of the armistice. Doctor Monprofit conceived the idea of the "tin hat" while campaigning in the Balkans in 1914.

Keeping It Dark.

"Go right back and tell your boss," roared a squire in a New England town, "that he's a blinched fool, and that he's to come here right away and fix up that carpentering job and fix it right."

The apprentice vanished, and a few minutes later the boss carpenter appeared, asking for a fight.

"Do I understand," he bellowed, "that you told my apprentice that I was a blinched fool?"

"Why, yes," replied the squire, beaming. "Didn't you want him to know it?"—American Legion Weekly.

Correspondence Courses.

Correspondence courses in cavalry, infantry and artillery work is the latest thing in the War department. These courses have been established in accordance with the movement for citizen training backed by the American Legion. A national plan has been worked out for their application all over the country. Five courses of instruction are offered in each branch of the service.

Find Hiking Dangerous.

Two sick ex-soldiers of the A. E. F., Frank Kennedy and Robert Mason, set out from New York just a year ago to walk to San Francisco in search of health. In the course of their quest they walked into two holdups, once by negroes and once by white men, were shot at and barely missed by an Oklahoma farmer whose land they were crossing, and nearly died of pneumonia poisoning in the deserts west of the Rockies. They arrived in San Francisco in good condition, but they will take a train for the return trip.

CAN NOW WALK AS WELL AS EVER

Esteemed Lincoln Resident Declares Tanlac Has Made a Clean Sweep of Her Rheumatism and Other Troubles.

"I couldn't believe all they said about Tanlac until I tried it myself, and now I never doubt what I read about it," said Mrs. Anna B. Crawford, 2300 N. 23rd St., Lincoln, Neb., wife of a well-known retired business man. "I got into a badly run-down condition," she continued, "and suffered greatly from indigestion. I had headache for days at a time, slept poorly and woke up mornings so weak and dizzy I could hardly get up. Then rheumatism set in and made walking difficult and I could scarcely use my arms for the pain."

"But Tanlac has made a clean sweep of my troubles, brought back my appetite and enabled me to gain much weight. It is a pleasure to make a statement in praise of this great medicine."

Tanlac is sold by all good druggists.

GUARDS WOOL FROM MOTHS

New Preparation Said to Preserve the Fabric From Depredations of the Pests.

A preparation has been discovered in Europe which, it is claimed, makes wool immune from the ravages of moths. It is in the form of a powder, which, before it is applied, is mixed in water with a small quantity of sulphuric acid for all wool goods, fur and being used for half-wool.

The wool itself is said not to be affected by the application, and only a few colors, very slightly. In case no alkalies are brought into contact with the wool remains moth-proof when washed. Tests made with two pieces of wool cloth exactly alike, in which moth eggs were placed, resulted, in the course of six months, in the entire disappearance of the untreated fabric, whereas the wool which had been treated remained intact.

Baby Specialists.

THAT there are Physicians who specialize on Infant ailments you know. All Physicians understand Infant troubles: all Physicians treat them. It is his profession, his duty, to know human ills from the Stork to the Great Beyond.

But in serious cases he calls in the Specialist. Why? He knows as every Mother knows, or ought to know, that Baby is just a baby, needing special treatment, special remedies.

Can a Mother be less thoughtful? Can a Mother try to relieve Baby with a remedy that she would use for herself? Ask yourself; and answer honestly!

Always remember that Baby is just a baby. And remembering this you will remember that Fletcher's Castoria is made especially for Infants and Children.

Children Cry For Fletcher's CASTORIA

The False and the True.

Advertising by the use of large space, the expenditure of huge sums of money have placed on the market, have put in your home, perhaps, many articles that today have been discarded, as you will readily admit.

Do you recall anything that has more modestly appealed to the public than has Fletcher's Castoria: modest in all its claims, pleading at all times—and truthfully—for our babies?

The big splash, the misleading claims may win for a time, but the honest truth-telling advertiser is like the old story of the tortoise that beat the hare.

Mothers everywhere, and their daughters, now mothers, speak frankly, glowingly, enthusiastically in praise of Fletcher's Castoria. Speak of it lovingly as a friend that has brought comfort, cheer and smiles to their little one.

To them: to these true mothers no argument can induce them to set aside their bottle of Castoria, their old friend, that they might try even another and unknown remedy for babies. Then, would YOU think of going to YOUR OWN medicine chest to find relief for Baby's troubles? Can you not separate the false from the true?

SWAMP-ROOT FOR KIDNEY AILMENTS

There is only one medicine that really stands out pre-eminent as a medicine for curable ailments of the kidneys, liver and bladder. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root stands the highest for the reason that it has proven to be just the remedy needed in thousands upon thousands of distressing cases. Swamp-Root makes friends quickly because its mild and immediate effect is soon realized in most cases. It is a gentle, healing vegetable compound.

Start treatment at once. Sold at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Advertisement.

terest, and the further sum of thirty ($30.00) dollars as an attorney fee stipulated for in said mortgage, and which is the whole amount claimed to be unpaid on said mortgage and no suit or proceeding having been instituted at law or in equity to recover the debt, notice is hereby given by said mortgage or any part thereof, whereby the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of said power of sale in such case made and provided, said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises therein described at public auction to the highest bidder at the front door of the court house in the Village of Grayling, in said County of Crawford, on the 3rd day of August, A. D. 1922, at MORTGAGE SALE.

Whereas, default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage, dated the 5th day of March, 1906, executed by Fred Sholts and Belle Sholts his wife, to Eliza J.
Brott, which said mortgage was recorded in the office of the registrar of deeds of Crawford County, Michigan, in Liber B of Mortgages on page 516, on March 5, 1906, and which said mortgage was assigned by Eliza J.
Brott, to William H. Wallace on February 21, 1910 and which assignment is recorded in the office of the registrar of deeds of Crawford County, Michigan, in Liber G of mortgages on page 633, on March 28, 1910.

And whereas, the amount claimed to be due on said mortgage at the date of this notice is $197.92 principal and interest and the further sum of $25.00 attorney fee as provided for in said mortgage and no suit or proceeding having been instituted at law or in equity to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof whereby the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale in such case made and provided,
said mortgage will be foreclosed by sale of the premises therein described at public auction to the highest bidder at the front door of the Court house in the village of Grayling,
Crawford County, Michigan, on July 25, 1922, at one o'clock in the afternoon, which premises are described as follows:

NOTICE.

Whereas, default has been made in the payment of money secured by a mortgage dated the seventh day of December A. D. 1904, executed by George Mahon and Nettie Mahon, his wife, then of the Village of Grayling, County of Crawford and State of Michigan, to Marius Hanson of the same place, which said mortgage was recorded in the office of the registrar of deeds in the County of Crawford and State of Michigan in Liber E of Mortgages on pages 568 and 569 on the eighth day of September A. D.
1905 at twelve o'clock M.

And Whereas the amount claimed to be due on said mortgage at the date of this notice is the sum of three hundred forty six and 96/100ths dollars, and the further sum of fifteen dollars, statutory attorney fee, and which is the whole amount claimed to be unpaid on said mortgage, and no suit or proceeding having been instituted at law or in equity to recover the debt now remaining secured by said mortgage or any part thereof, whereby the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative.

Now Therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the said power of sale in such case made and provided, said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises therein described at public auction to the highest bidder at the front door of the court house in the Village of Grayling in said County of Crawford, that being the place wherein is holden the Circuit Court for the County of Crawford, on the seventeenth day of June,
A. D. 1922 at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, which said premises are described as follows, to wit: Lots Five and Six of Block Eight of Hadley's Second Addition to the Village of Grayling, Michigan, according to the recorded plat thereof.

Fordson

THE UNIVERSAL TRACTOR

Henry Ford

HENRY FORD was 35 years getting ready for the new price on the Fordson. He started as a farm boy, planning to get rid of the drudgery, long hours and low money return that has always faced the farmer.

He wanted to furnish you with a tractor that would not only do your work better and faster, but at lower costs—and the 170,000 Fordsons now in use have proved that he has accomplished these things.

What you get in the Fordson for $395 f. o. b. Detroit is the greatest farm power unit ever offered.

Let us show you how a Fordson will cut farm costs, increase your bank account and take the drudgery out of farm work. Write, phone or call.

The game between Albin and Frederic played the same day was won by Frederic.

Maple Forest people are complaining of the manner in which the Knickerbocker cemetery is being kept. One person tells us that dead trees that have fallen over two years ago still recline there and that the grass in the summer grows two feet high. It would seem that at least before Memorial day that those owning lots would prefer to have them made neat and plant flowers that would bloom each season. This Decoration day one lone lot in that cemetery was freshened for Memorial day.

On the Road of Good Intentions

Yucatan's Influence

Henequen means reasonably cheap and plentiful binder twine; while binder twine makes possible the use of harvesting machines; harvesters cheapen grain production; cheap grain means cheap bread; and so henequen—and arid Yucatan—play important parts in feeding America and the world. Henequen, which is a sort of cactus but unlike the century plant or the "pulque cactus" in appearance, has been grown in Yucatan since prehistoric times and its fiber was used in local plantation and village industries. But there was no outside market of considerable magnitude for the fiber until the increasing use of harvesting machinery in the United States created a demand for larger quantities of binder twine.

Bushel Basket of Snakes. Thomas Jacobs (colored) and the score of his life blowing on the Elgood farm near here last week when he unearthed a nest of blacksnakes, which, he says, would have filled a bushel basket. So great was his fright that he left the farm and made his way to the road in what is believed to be record time.

He succeeded in reaching the road ahead of the snakes and built a fire to stop them. Everybody that knows the speed of the blacksnake in the spring knows that Jacobs has been a good man.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

by MARY GRAHAM BONNER

FATHER FOOD

"What is the matter now, Butter?" asked Father Food. "I should think you and Bread would know enough not to quarrel by this time. In fact I always thought you got along beautifully and now, these past few days, I've heard you talking and scolding each other."

"What is the trouble?" "Oh," said Butter, "Bread is so conceited. Bread says it is more important than any other member of our family, Father."

"Bread says it doesn't need me in the least, but it lets me come along just because it's nice in a way to have company."

"Now I've told Bread that it wouldn't be nearly so nice without me, and then too, think how useful I am! If anyone gets a horrid, painful burn, a little of me on the place which has been burned is a great, great help."

"I ease the pain, tremendously."

"That is quite true, Butter, but what Bread has said is also true. Bread is a very necessary and important member of my family."

"But you two mustn't quarrel. It is so absurd. Why, what would people say if they thought that Bread and Butter had taken to quarreling?"

"It's the natural thing to put you two together. For years and years you've been the best of friends and brothers so that people always speak of Bread and Butter together."

"They hardly think of you separately."

Butter began to cry a little.

"There, there, Butter, don't cry. You don't want to melt away in tears. And you've just been acting a little bit foolishly lately. So has Bread. You'll not act so foolishly again, I'm sure."

"For it is foolish—that's all."

"Very foolish," said Butter, "and we've both been really unhappy about it."

"Now, we'll have lessons," said Father Food. "Come, children, come."

children. Lessons are about to begin."

So all the children came hurrying along with their slates and pencils under their arms.

"Radishes!" said Father Food.

"Present," said the Radishes.

"Potatoes," said Father Food.

"Present," said the Potatoes.

"Onions," said Father Food.

"Present," said the Onions, and some of the others wept as they moved about a little as they spoke.

For Bathing or Swimming; Hats for Midsummer Wear

THE summer girl and the rest of womankind will answer the call of the water this year in bathing suits that differ greatly from each other in materials and style. Their story begins with a short, introductory chapter, calling attention to such simple and practical stuff as checked and plain ginghams, playing the unfamiliar role of bathing dress. But it soon quits cotton and moves to woolen fabrics, where it lingers longest, since the great majority of manufactured bathing suits are made of wool. Finally the story takes up silks, where beauty of material, decorative features and clever construction occupy the thoughts of designers who deal with such inspiring things as taffeta, silk jersey and moire.

Regulation swimming suits, like those illustrated, do not differ much. The knitting mills turn them out in many colors and weaves, varying them in little details, as in the shape of the neck opening, length of the sleeves and methods of decoration. They are trim, elastic, wool garments, made for the business of swimming, with the trunks and undergarments joined. The swimming girl has reason to rejoice in them—especially if her figure justifies so frank an expression of its lines and curves as these suits reveal.

Bathing suits of gingham are effectively made by combining plain and feminine world hats that are adorable. And "strand" is the right word for hats grow wide brimmed as the sun travels north. Milliners revel in the airy brims and fabrics that warrant this width of brim—the lace, crepes, organdies and hair brims that allow the sunlight to filter through them as through summer foliage. Colors are exquisite and combinations of them, in pastel shades, are fascinating. To cap the climax soft feathers and many flowers are held in high regard.

Four models, as shown here, reveal a little of the picturesque mode. The lovely hat at the top may be imagined with brim of georgette or organdie and a soft braid crown to match in color. It is lovely in any of the season's favored colors—as orchid, apricot, brown—with roses bunched across the back and narrow ribbons making a dash falling in loops and ends at the checked patterns, as in suits with full knickerbockers of the plain color, gathered into bands that button around. In the knees, a yoke and short sleeves of this plain material is joined to a checked tunic, and the sleeves are finished with checked cuffs. Whatever the goods, whether cotton, wool, or silk, bathing suits are made with knee length knickers, skirts a little shorter, tunics with low waist line, sometimes bloused, and sleeves that may be brief, but are always present. In this particular and in the neck line, the individual may choose to protect her arms from the sun if she will, with long sleeves finished with cuffs to match a little round collar that completes the small neck opening.

Undergarments. New lingerie shows chemise and step-in sets of white voile edged with bands of blue or pink dotted voile. Striped surf satin is used for these sets, as is seersucker crepe. An orchid wash crepe set has a lace edge and scalloped edge on the step-in.

Style for Gowns. A favorite style at present is that of the front and back panel held loosely together at each side by a knot of ribbon and falling lower than the hem of the underdress. This style gives an air of great simplicity to the gown. But, as a matter of fact, the gown is not at all simple, for the panels require with an underdress and some sort of beaded or flowered grille to keep them from floating at random.

Medieval Tea Gown. Chiffon brocaded with velvet is particularly stunning for the medieval tea gown in favor at the moment. The long-pointed, flowing sleeves are made of plain chiffon.

COULD HARDLY STAND AT TIMES

Hips, Back and Legs Would Have That Tired Ache

Everett, Washington.—"For several years I have had trouble with the lowest part of my back and my hips and my legs would ache with that tired ache. I could hardly stand at times. I was always able to do my work, although I did not feel good. I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised and having heard several praise it I decided to try it. I feel first-rate at the present time. It has done wonders for me and I keep it in the house right along. I always recommend it to others who are sick and ailing."

"Mrs. J. M. SIBBERT, 4032 High St., Everett, Washington."

To do any kind of work, or to play for that matter, is next to impossible if you are suffering from some form of female trouble. It may cause your back or your legs to ache, it may make you nervous and irritable. You may be able to keep up and around, but you do not feel good.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a medicine for women. It is especially adapted to relieve the cause of the trouble and then these annoying pains, aches and "no good" feelings disappear.

It has done this for many, many women; why not give it a fair trial—now.

Too Optimistic. "I like optimists. They are good men to follow."

"Not always at the races."

Farm Bureau Notes

R. D. BAILEY
County Agricultural Agent

Detour!!

Detour!! Wherever he drives now the farmer, as well as, others, sees these signs.

He who heeds those well-meant signs, placed with good intent, does well. He saves himself a lot of trouble and is guided to a better way.

He who does not heed them, runs into trouble, and has only himself to blame.

Detour!! People of all the occupations that are getting satisfactory results are making detours, or have made them.

If managers of street car lines had not heeded the sign "Detour," cars on those lines would still be drawn by horses.

If doctors had not detoured and adopted other, they would still be cutting off legs and arms while the patient screamed.

If dentists had blindly plunged on, like us farmers, though confronted with the sign "Detour," our teeth would not be drawn with so little pain. If everybody were so slow to detour, to turn out, to change, to pick up a good thing, a better way, towns would be in darkness and we would sit in our gloomy homes squinting by the wretched light of a tallow dip.

Detour!! If the leaders had not detoured, sought better ways, the world would sink hopeless and helpless before the ravages of tuberculosis, smallpox, pneumonia, yellow fever and diphtheria.

Brother farmer, you and I are queer people. We don't detour very much in our business.

We expect other occupations to find the best ways to do their work—to pull our teeth by easy methods; to give us electric light in our trains instead of lamps; invent telephones; to invent cement and the paper packing box when lumber became scarce; to improve our self-blinders, plows and phonographs, and to give us moving pictures; but, we, because we are farmers, try to fool ourselves into believing that we are a privileged class, a class apart, different, a kind of people who do not need to detour, to change, to seek better ways. Can you beat it!!

We take into our lives rural delivery, parcels post, telephones, autos and better roads to run them on; but, in the actual conduct of our very own work, we do not very often detour, seek a better way, or follow a better way though we meet some who have traveled better ways and takes the trouble to tell us which way to go.

We go on, year after year, without a silo though corn stalks waste more than half their food value by standing out.

We don't hill-select our seed corn, nor intelligently cure it, nor test before planting.

We don't hill-select seed potatoes, nor spray for blight.

Because we have once planted them without selecting or treating we think we always can.

It may be a little trouble to detour;

but it may be more profitable, and save trouble.

If timothy and clover fail we think we must submit to empty hay mows.

Detour!!

If oats are covered with smut, don't think it must be so. Detour!!

If the farm is running out, detour!

Use Green Manure.

If we have the idea that alfalfa can not grow here and cut two luxuriant crops a year, read the sign board "Detour."

If we are sick of waiting a year for a chance to sell beef animals and then get an offer of five cents, four cents, three cents, a cent and a half a pound, all of which were offered here, detour, and keep dairy cows, good ones and put a can of cream on the train every few days, forget it, and receive a check by mail in a few days.

If we think that, just because we are farming, we must grow potatoes, and lift and lug on them, and take the fertility away from the farm, and make money on them often enough to bait us on to try it again until we lose it, let us detour, brother farmer, and raise ensilage corn on the same ground, feed it to dairy cattle, get frequent cream checks, and have a mountain of manure to put back on the land. Detour!!

If we think it is money saved to keep scrub cattle, and to breed to scrub wayside bulls because we save two dollars, for mercy sake man, let us detour.

If we think that pile of stable manure must necessarily lie there and heat and leach a year, detour!

If we think that thoughtful reading of books and bulletins on farm management is silly, and that careful perusal of two or three high class weekly farm papers is waste time; detour brother, detour quick.

THAT DULL ACHING.

Don't worry and complain about a bad back. Get rid of it! For weak kidneys, lame and aching backs, your neighbors recommend Doan's Kidney Pills. Ask your neighbor!

Mrs. Edw. C. King, Grayling, says: "Some time ago my back caused me considerable trouble. It was lame and ached through the small part, and a dull ache seemed to settle there. When I had any lifting or stooping I do I always got a pain in my back and was often tired and weak and all worn out. I began to worry and became depressed and irritable. I was blinded by specks coming before my eyes and headaches came on suddenly. My kidneys had me in a run down condition and I felt wretched all over. I was advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills so I got some at Olson's Drug Store and they cured me."

Price 80c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. King had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

THE HOME OF THE SOUL.

In olden times, it was believed that the seat of the soul was the stomach, most likely for the reason that a man is never so completely used up as when his stomach is out of order. For the cure of ordinary stomach troubles, there is nothing quite so prompt and satisfactory as Chamberlain's Tablets. They strengthen the stomach and enable it to perform its functions naturally. Give them a trial. They only cost a quarter.

WHY SUFFER FROM RHEUMATISM.

Do you know that nine out of every ten cases of rheumatism are simply rheumatism of the muscles or chronic rheumatism, neither of which require any internal treatment? The pain may be relieved by applying Chamberlain's Liniment, which makes sleep and rest possible, and that certainly means a great deal to any one afflicted with rheumatism.
